NEWSPAPER HISTORY

The Rockland Gazette was established in 1846, in 1874 the Courier was established, and consolidated with the Gazette in 1882. The Free Press was established in 1885, and in 1891 changed its name to the Tribune. These papers consolidated March 17, 1897.

He has not learned the lesson of life who does not every day surmount a fear.—Emerson.

The Goss quarry at Crotch Island, Stonington, has shipped over 150 cargoes of stone the past year.

Word has been sent broadcast to supporters of President Taft that under no circumstances would the President countenance attacks on Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, no matter what the ultimate intention of Mr. Roosevelt in regard to the Republican Presidential nomination might be.

"Where do our educated seals come from?" asked Representative Shary of Ohio, in Congress last week.

"Practically all of them from New England," Dr. Everman replied. He added that Maine supplied most of the trained seals and they were all of the harbor variety whose fur is not worth much.

A Washington despatch to the New York Evening Post announces that Senator La Follette is coming to Maine to speak in favor of Presidential preference primaries, and it is given out that the Senator will probably speak in Portland, Augusta and Bangor. The Post intimates that La Follette's idea is that if the people were to express their preference in direct primaries for Presidential candidate, there is some prospect that the delegation from the State of Maine might be secured in favor of himself as the candidate of the Republican party for President. The Post despatch says that Mr. La Follette will come here prior to the special session of the Legislature in March, with the expectation of arousing sentiment enough in favor of his plan to secure action by the Legislature upon it.

A girl baby which was born in Detroit last week will be educated to speak esperanto. John Conrad Butler, the father, is the foremost advocate in America of the so-called universal language. He and his wife use it exclusively when conversing together, though, of course, they have to use English when speaking to others.

Bids for the construction of the two 27,000-ton battleships Oklahoma and Nevada were opened last Thursday. The lowest proposals were from the New York Shipbuilding Company of Camden, N. J., at $5,926,000 for one ship, and the Fore River Shipbuilding Company of Quincy, Mass., at $5,935,000 per ship.

The new catalogue of the University of Maine shows the total number of students to be 896, of whom 195 come from out of the state. Massachusetts furnishes 120, and there are six from foreign countries. Knox is represented by 21 students, Lincoln has eight and Hancock has 32. Naturally Penobscot county leads, with 235.

It was announced at the office of State Treasurer Singleton recently that for the first time since 1908, the cash balance at the close of the calendar year is in excess of half a million dollars. On the completion of business Dec. 30, 1911, Treasurer Singleton noted that the balance stood at $502,202.58. In 1908 at the close of Governor Cobb's administration the cash balance in the treasury was $568,534.44.

There was nothing to attract particular notice as, one day last week, the British packet Erne slipped into Boston harbor. Yet, her arrival marked the close of a race which had been fought for 52 days over a distance of 8000 miles from Buenos Ayres, and which was remarkable because at the end of the nearly two months' time the loser, the British bark Gael, was only six hours behind the Erne. The principal point of interest in the race for Maine people, however, lies in the fact that the Maine man, Capt. Temple Fickett, is captain of the winning vessel. The two ships left the Plate river Oct. 26, and though the direct route from the mouth to Boston is only 5000 miles they had to fight head winds so much that each covered about 3000 miles more in their passage.

In "The Suburban Woman and the Church" in Suburban Life, Margaret Woodward tells of a suburban church that had a reputation for not being cordial to strangers: "The head of a certain family of new-comers attended a reception held in this church. His first words upon addressing the pastor were like the exploding of a bomb in the enemy's camp. They showed ill-breeding in every syllable.

"Sir," said the stranger, "We've come to your church, and now we hope we shan't freeze. People tell us we shall." The fine courtesy and Christian spirit of the pastor's reply won our hearts.

"My friend," said the minister gently, "We hope you will share your own heart's warmth with us. The aggressor was made aware in a delicate way of the fact that strangers have their duties to perform, as well as the church. 'A man to have friends must show himself friendly.' Strangers should at least be willing to go half way, to meet the courtesies which the church invariably extends."

IMPORTANT POLITICAL YEAR

President, Thirty-One Governors and a New Congress to be Elected—Republicans Will Probably Name Taft; Democrats at Sea.

Politically the year 1912 will be one of the most important within the memory of the men who direct the destinies of the two great parties.

Besides choosing a President the electorate of the Nation will select new House of Representatives which will have to deal with momentous National and international problems, and the voters of the various commonwealths will choose 31 new governors and Legislatures which will have to select 30 new United States Senators.

Not in a generation have the voters of the country been called upon to perform a more solemn duty. There is every indication that the battle for the Presidency will be one of the most titanic struggles in the history of the present dominant parties and that it will be marked by campaigns the like of which have not been known in a generation. Already the lines are shaping. The Democrats, full of enthusiasm and confidence, say that victory has already been won upon their banner. The Republicans, discouraged in spots, are preparing for a desperate contest, the result of which, they assert, will be the reelection of President Taft.

No one within the inner ranks of the Democratic party will make a prediction as to whom their standard bearer will be. The general impression prevails that it lies between Governor Harmon of Ohio and Governor Wilson of New Jersey, with the former a favorite at the present time and the chances good for a deadlock and the nomination of some third party candidate. Underwood of Alabama; Champ Clark of Missouri; Foss of Massachusetts; Governor Marshall of Indiana; Mayor Gaynor of New York or Governor Baldwin of Connecticut. Some members of the New York Democracy express the belief that Governor La Follette of Wisconsin, but this talk is not taken up with any great seriousness outside of New York.

Expect Taft's Nomination

On the Republican side it is generally believed that President Taft will be re-nominated. In fact, persons who have watched the various moves in the National game say that nothing, not even the avowed candidacy of Theodore Roosevelt, can prevent the re-nomination of the President. It is expected in many quarters that Mr. Roosevelt, while not announcing himself as a candidate, would be glad to run if the convention nominated him. Not even the most enthusiastic Republicans believe, however, that he would make anything like the run he made in 1904, when he swept the country by an almost unprecedented majority over Judge Alton B. Parker.

In many states the contests over the governorship will be of the sharpest character, as will also the contests for members of House of Representatives. The Republicans have already laid the ground-work for their Congress campaign and say that they will regain some of the ground lost in the Democratic landslide of 1908, which made the House Democratic. States which will elect governors are:

Arkansas, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Maine, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, New Hampshire, New York, North Carolina, North Dakota, Rhode Island, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Washington, West Virginia, Wisconsin and Arizona.

This is a list of the United States senators whose terms will expire on March 3, 1913:

Democrats—Augustus D. Bacon, Georgia; Joseph W. Bailey, Texas; John H. Bankhead, Alabama; Jeff Davis, Arkansas; Murphy J. Foster, Louisiana; Obadiah Gardner, Maine; Thomas S. Martin, Virginia; Robert L. Owen, Oklahoma; Thomas H. Paynter, Kentucky; Leroy Percy, Mississippi; F. M. Simmons, North Carolina; Robert L. Taylor, Tennessee; Benjamin R. Tillman, South Carolina; and Clarence W. Watson, West Virginia.

Republicans—William E. Borah, Idaho; Jonathan Bourne, Jr., Oregon; Frank O. Briggs, New Jersey; Norris Brown, Nebraska; Henry E. Burnham, New Hampshire; W. Murray Crane, Massachusetts; Shelby M. Cullion, Illinois; Charles Curtis, Kansas; Joseph M. Dixon, Montana; Robert J. Gamble, South Dakota; Simon Guggenheim, Colorado; William S. Kenyon, Iowa; Knute Nelson, Minnesota; Harry A. Richardson, Delaware; William Alden Smith, Michigan; Francis E. Warren, Wyoming; and George R. Wetmore of Rhode Island.

Republican Possibilities

The Republican National Convention will be held in the Coliseum, Chicago, on June 18. Only four men have been mentioned in connection with the nominations—President Taft, Theodore Roosevelt, Justice Charles E. Hughes and Senator La Follette.

The latter is at the present time making a campaign for delegates in the Middle West and will continue to "stump" the country up almost to the eve of the convention.

Justice Hughes is talked of as a compromise candidate in case there is a deadlock between President Taft and Mr. Roosevelt. By those who have watched the developments most closely, however, it is believed that the President will without question be re-nominated, even though an effort be made to stampee the convention for Mr. Roosevelt.

The Democratic convention will be held probably during the first week in July. New York, Chicago, St. Louis and Baltimore are all making efforts to obtain it. While New York is putting up a formidable fight, it is expected by the Democratic leaders that the assemblage will be either in St. Louis or Baltimore.

From the day the nominations are made the battle will be on, and both the Republicans and Democrats expect it will be one of the most picturesque and important Presidential struggles in the recent history of the country.

FAVORS TROLLEY LINE

But Belfast Journal Hopes to See Both That and Steam Road from Rockland to Belfast Some Day.

The Courier-Gazette received a straight tip this week that the Maine Central Railroad extension to Belfast will be built within two years. We give it to our readers for what it may be worth.—Rockland Courier-Gazette.

Everybody believes that an electric or steam road will connect Belfast and Rockland at no distant day and one of these roads would have been built long ago but for conflicting interests. A charter for an electric road from Stockton Springs to Belfast was obtained many years ago, and at that time there was a charter for an electric road from Bangor to Stockton Springs, and the road was begun but has got no further than Frankfort. While the charter for a road from Stockton Springs to Camden, granted by the legislature, was in force, R. Frank and Percy C. Pierce got a charter from the railway commissioners for an electric road from Belfast to Camden, but made no move toward building and the charter lapsed.

The other charter, with some modifications, has been renewed every two years, with changes in the corporations. Several thousand dollars have been expended on surveys and arranging terms with real estate owners along the line, and at times the building of the road has seemed near at hand. Then something has happened—just what only those inside could tell—but the public has attributed it to the opposition of competing lines on land or water, and perhaps this is not far out of the way.

There has been other opposition—not enough, however, to have much effect—coming from livery concerns and from those who thought an electric road to Rockland would take business away from this city. For the development of the country along the coast from Rockland to Stockton Springs we believe an electric road, carrying freight as well as passengers, would be better than a steam road over the proposed route back from the shore, and that it would pay in time. Perhaps some day we may see both roads built.—Belfast Journal.

THAT DECEMBER WEATHER

Only Three Other Decembers on Record Where Mean Temperature Was Higher.

While the month of December 1911 did not prove to be the warmest December on record it proved one of the warmest in the past 40 years and according to the monthly report of the Portland weather bureau there have been only three Decembers on record when warmer temperatures have prevailed. The precipitation for the month also proved to be particularly heavy as the fall during the 31 days amounted to 4.49 inches, or .88 inches greater than the normal.

The mean temperature of the month was 33 degrees against the normal mean for December of 28.4. There were indeed very few days when the temperature was not above the normal, and the only previous Decembers when the mean was higher than during the month just passed were December, 1877, when the mean temperature was 33.9, Decers, 1881, when the mean temperature was 37 degrees, and December, 1896, when the mean temperature was 35.6 degrees. The average maximum temperature for the month was 39.5 degrees, while the average minimum temperature for the month was 26.6 degrees. There were, during the month, seven cloudy days, 14 partly cloudy days and nine days on which .01 inches or more of precipitation occurred.

SAVED BY TELEPHONE

Bad Fire Thus Stopped in Home of A. G. Sukeforth, Washington.

The residence of Amos G. Sukeforth on the road leading from Stickney's Corner to Union, came near being destroyed by fire last Thursday afternoon, and never could have been saved if they had not had a telephone.

Mr. Sukeforth was away and his sister who keeps house for him, was alone with the exception of a neighbor, Miss Della Robbins, and whose heroic efforts kept the flames checked until help arrived. The chimney burned out earlier in the day, and must have left some smoldering sparks, for a place was ablaze around the ell chimney when discovered and a hole of 15 feet around the chimney was burned before the fire was extinguished.

The neighbors live quite a distance away and if they had not been called by telephone the entire stand of nice farm buildings would have been destroyed. The loss from fire and smoke will be about $300; partially insured.

REV. MR. MOORE'S CALL

As Pastor of All Souls Church, Bangor, Will Receive $3500 and Use of Parish House.

The Bangor News has the following to say about the selection of a former Rockland minister as pastor of the All Souls Congregational church in Bangor.

"As was a foregone conclusion, the first pastor of the new church will be Rev. Charles A. Moore, who has filled the pulpit of Central church so ably for the past few years. Dr. D. A. Robinson, Rev. David M. Beach, J. H. Crosby, F. W. Adams and Hon. Arthur Chapin were appointed the committee on nominations. Their report recommended that the call be extended to Mr. Moore; that his salary be $3500 annually; that he be tendered the use of the parish house as a vacation during the months of July and August; that a committee notify his of the call; and, finally, that a committee be chosen to co-operate with a second committee, to be selected later by the trustees, to arrange at the proper time for his installation. All of these recommendations were adopted unanimously, by rising vote, amid inspiring enthusiasm. The nominating committee was continued as the committee of notification, and on installation."

Mr. Moore's new church edifice will be one of the finest in Maine, costing, exclusive of the parish house about $95,000. A sum exceeding $70,000 is already raised or pledged. Mr. Moore's success is highly pleasing to his host of Rockland friends.

YOUR FAVORITE POEM

Old-fashioned poetry, but choicely good.

—Isaac Walton.

The Bright Spirit

He did his best with all his might, He labored on year after year, And yet his world was seldom bright, The sky he viewed was seldom clear; He gave the best he had to give, And merited the right to live.

He clung to hope, with purpose grim He strove to win the world's applause; But few men ever noticed him, Or cared how dutiful he was; With all the courage of the brave, The best he had to give he gave.

One day he learned to cease to care For rich rewards or for applause; He sold for love, and then there came The world found out how great he was; For love of what he did he strove, And straightaway all his ventures thrrove.

—S. E. Kiser.

Plumber Rat.

An old story used to go around of a plumber who kept a lot of rats in his shop in a trap, and when he had a call always took one along. The rat was frightened or forced to take to the drain, and he burrowed through to his liberty in the sewer. Of course, it was not necessary to take the pipes all to pieces, but the big bill came in, anyhow.

Merely Moral Effect.

"Some o' dese reformers," said Uncle Rastusberry, "makes me think of Rastus Pinkley's dog. I says to 'im, 'Rastus,' I says, 'is dat good foh rats?' An' he says, 'No; he's mighty bad foh rats.' 'Does he ketch 'em an' kill 'em?' 'No,' says 'Rastus; he don't ketch 'em, ner he don't kill 'em. But if they comes foolin' around him he'll mighty near skeer 'em to death.'—Washington Star.

Napoleon's Capricious Appetite.

Napoleon had a penchant for roast fowls, cutlets and smoking coffee. He ate at odd times, and only when he felt hungry, driving his cooks to distraction because when he came for food it had to be ready for him almost on the instant, or at least as soon as the table could be laid.

Picturesque Manchuria.

Wheat comes into the mills and to the rivers and railways of Manchuria from almost incredible distances. In the winter, when the rough, ungraded roads are frozen hard and smooth, the natives haul wheat for 200 miles, in some cases by means of a heavy, two-wheeled cart drawn by four to eight mules. Long trains of these carts, traveling together for protection and companionship at night, can be seen on the main highways all winter and are the most picturesque feature of Manchurian life.

Not Profanity.

The word "dam" is the name of a small coin used in India and of very small value, and is also the name given by tinkers to a small wad of paper put into a hole in tinware when mending it for the purpose of preventing the solder from running through. Both mean of little value, so the expression really means "I don't care the value of a dam."

Attractive to Men.

No woman has been heard to rave over the beauties of millinery, but men must have found something alluring in the shapes and colors, especially those samples that are displayed in One Hundred and Twenty-ninth street shop, for one member of that thoroughfare has considered it expedient to decorate her window with this sign: "Men are requested not to lounge against these windows."—New York Times.

Busy Embroiderers.

As early as 1773 over 6,000 women were engaged in stitching the fine embroideries which made St. Gall famous even in those early days. The number had increased by the beginning of 1800 to 30,000, the industry having extended to Baden, Wurtemberg, Bavaria, western Austria and all the country about Lake Constance.

COTTON-PETTEE

Fremont Cotton and Gertrude Pettee were married Saturday evening by Rev. Russell Woodman at the Rectory. On their return to the home of the bride, they were greeted with showers of rice from a party of friends, who, during their absence, has taken possession of the pretty home and transformed it into a bower of pale yellow and white, this being the colors of a Circle connected with the Golden Cross of which the young lady is pianist. Under an arch made of holly leaves and white flowers, received the congratulations of some 25 guests. The bride looked very pretty in a dainty white muslin. Lunch was served. The couple received many pretty and useful presents. The young people will reside for the present at 10 Kelley street.

OXTON-SYLVESTER

Jan. 1 at 1 p. m. a very pretty wedding took place at "Grassy Ways" on the Rockland Road, when Beulah May Sylvester of Rockville was united in marriage to Elbert Alvin Oxtan of Rockland. The officiating clergyman was Rev. Miles G. Tupper of West Rockport.

At the strains of the wedding march the bridal pair entered the parlor and stood under a white arch, from the center of which was suspended a large white bell. The room was prettily decorated in green and white. The ring ceremony was used, and with music softly played by Miss Helen Cooper of Rockland, a former high school pupil of the bride, they were united in the holy bonds of matrimony. The bride was attired in a dress of white silk muslin, with lace and satin ribbon trimmings. She carried brides roses tied with white ribbon.

The ceremony was followed by a reception. After hearty congratulations a wedding lunch was served to about 35 guests. The bride received a large number of useful and valuable presents, which showed the high esteem in which she is held by her many friends and relatives. They will be "at home" after Jan. 15 at their residence, "Grassy Ways," Rockland.

Good Hint. Those who keep up a regular correspondence with several friends will find it a good plan to keep envelopes addressed to each of them in some convenient place, and into these to slip newspaper cuttings and notes of things which will interest each particular correspondent. NEW EMPIRE THEATRE

This is the week of big things at this theatre. The vaudeville bill is one of the best yet offered there. George Banks, called the fellow with one thousand laughs, got three curtain calls after his act yesterday afternoon, and caught the audiences again at the evening performance. Lottie Glenmore and Cain present a great comedy sketch lasting 18 minutes, during which nobody keeps a sober countenance. The pictures are the Empire kind, which means the best. Wednesday night there will be at the Empire the big musical event of the season, the Chapman concert. Mr. Chapman promises music lovers the best concert he has ever given in Rockland. Don't wait until the seats are all gone before you order. Thursday, Friday and Saturday Manager Engley offers the big dramatic offering of the season, when W. H. Mack and his clever company of stars will be seen in the "New Minister." Don't fail to see this act at the Empire Theatre.

Windor Percels at E. B. Hastings & Co., at 10 cents per yard.

ROCKLAND THEATRE

A crowded house last night witnessed two excellent acts of vaudeville. Heading the bill is a comedy talking and singing skit presented by Flynn, Craig and Hayward, entitled "How Props Butted In." This little skit portrays stage life as seldom seen by others outside the circle of those connected with the profession. There is plenty of comedy, plenty of singing and plenty of all the good things that go to make this act a winner from start to finish. The other act on the bill, "The Australian Wheelers," a bicycle novelty, full of comedy. What these two cannot do on wheels is not worth seeing. The two features of this act are "a somersault over a table still on a bicycle" and "Hooping the Hoop."

The new bill for the latter part of the week, Banks, Braxale Duo, musical novelty, and Clous & Hoffman, German comedians.

Positively one of the best picture programs ever offered to the theatre-goers of Rockland will be shown tomorrow and Thursday, headed with Kalem's big feature "The Express Envelope," a thrilling railroad story based on a recent happening in the West. The old station agent becomes his wife and daughter, Hazel, takes his place. Freight engineer, Tom Evans, Hazel's sweetheart, makes a call. A message comes over the wire addressed to Supt. of the Lucky Strike mine, reading: "Express envelope containing money for monthly payroll on 9:20 express." H. L. Babby, Treasurer. This picture contains many thrilling as well as dramatic and joyful scenes which no one should fail to see. Surrounding this big feature is a Vitaphone Comedy, "The Wrong Patient" and "Queer Folk," on the same reel. "The Wrong Patient" is a laughable and comical affair, as one is led to believe from the title. "Queer Folk" is filled with laughs and takes you all through the side shows of the "circus," a vast hippodrome of fun and frolic. Don't miss this.

Two Indictments for Murder

Grand Jury Finds Five Bills Against John H. Fellows in Long Cove Case and Clarence Curtis in Washington Case—Other Court Proceedings

The testimony in the case of Fannie B. McGown vs. the Inhabitants of the town of Washington was concluded Friday and court convened at 9 o'clock Saturday morning so that the case could be disposed of Saturday forenoon, but the snowstorm of Friday night prevented this being done. Juror George A. Tuttle of Camden was unable to get a car from that place Saturday morning and finally, after an hour's delay, the case was argued, by agreement of counsel, to the eleven jurors present and Judge Savage postponed his charge to Monday, so that Mr. Tuttle could be present. Judge Savage adjourned court from Saturday noon to Monday at 11 o'clock so that he could attend to some matters in Auburn.

McGown vs. Washington went on trial Thursday afternoon and five talesmen were drawn from the audience by the Sheriff, E. K. Vinchenbach of Thomaston, W. A. Collins of South Thomaston, W. J. Coakley and Fred Lothrop of Rockland and Wesley C. Waltz of Warren, to fill up the panel. This case was instituted at the September term, 1910, at the conclusion of the evidence for the plaintiff, on motion of counsel for the town and the plaintiff took the case to the Law court on exceptions to the ruling of Judge Bird granting the nonsuit, in which exceptions were sustained in a recent decision of the court which was printed in this paper.

Mrs. McGown claims that she was injured by being thrown from the wagon in which she was returning to her home in Somerville from the Washington Campmeeting, August 15, 1909, the accident being caused by the horse's forward feet and legs going through a plank in the causeway near the foot of the Robert Patrick hill in the town of Washington. The causeway was a part of the highway which the defendant town was liable to repair and it is claimed that the causeway was formed in part of old, decayed and unsafe plank, which was a defect in the highway and that the town authorities had at least 24 hours actual notice of the defect.

Suit was brought March 4, 1910, for $5000 damages, and plaintiff claims that her right leg, (below the knee), a small bone in her left foot and two ribs on her left side were broken and both of her ankles were sprained. She testified that she was not yet able to get about without using a cane or having help. The plaintiff claims that George Hibbard was a substitute for agent of the road commissioner for 1908 and 1909. William W. Light who had charge of this portion of the highway and that Hibbard was notified by Joseph Kenney in the Spring of 1909 that he (Kenney) had broken through the bridge. It was admitted that the causeway was out of repair in 1908 and that it was then repaired by Mr. Hibbard but plaintiff claims that it was not then put in suitable repair and that two old plank were left in the bridge.

Phineas Curtis testified that he preserved the broken plank through which Mrs. McGown's horse broke and that it was rotten.

The defense claimed that the causeway was thoroughly repaired in October, 1908, and that since then there had been no twenty-four hour's notice of any defect to the town or anyone authorized to receive the notice, as required by statute, from October, 1908, until the McGown accident. It is claimed that the plank that the horse broke through was a new plank when the bridge was repaired, that it was a hemlock plank and that it slid and broke entirely off at one end and that it was not rotten or decayed and that there was no way in which the town could guard against or foresee the accident, and that the rest of the plank was sound. Mr. Hibbard deposed that he had received any notice of Mr. Kenney's accident, and Mr. Light and others testified that the plank through which Mrs. McGown's horse broke was taken to his house and preserved until his buildings were destroyed by fire when it was burned. Mr. Light testified that he thoroughly inspected the causeway after Mr. Hibbard had repaired it and found it all right.

In brief, the whole case turned on the questions whether or not the causeway was properly repaired in 1908 and whether or not the town authorities had at least twenty-four hours notice of its defective condition. A large number of witnesses were summoned on each side, fifteen being sworn for the town, and the case has aroused much interest in the towns of Washington and Somerville, some of the witnesses seeming to feel that their own reputations are at stake, as statements of witnesses on the one side and the other are directly opposed to each other.

One witness for the plaintiff was the especial target for the defense and every other witness was questioned as to the reputation of this man for truth and veracity.

A verdict for the plaintiff in the sum of $1523 was returned this morning.

The Grand Jury reported Friday afternoon returning nine indictments, one of which is not yet made public. The others are as follows:

John H. Fellows of St. George for murder. The respondent is charged with having killed Richard Ingram in the granite company's boarding house at Long Cove, St. George, on the night of Dec. 23. The two men were alone in the boarding house when the tragedy occurred, and nothing is known of the details except that which was told by the accused. According to his story Ingram had been drinking during the night and the quarrel was started by Ingram's demand for more liquor after Fellows had retired for the night. When Fellows refused to give him more liquor Ingram is alleged to have threatened him with a knife. Fellows knocked the paving cutter down, but when the latter arose he renewed the attack with an iron stove-poker. Seizing a carving knife Fellows struck him in the mouth severing arteries, and causing almost instant death. This in brief is Fellows' story of the affair.

Clarence Curtis of Washington, for murder. The respondent is charged with having killed his sister, Grace Curtis, at Washington, by beating her so badly with a large rock that she died three days after the assault. The couple lived alone on the road from Cunningham's Corner to Jefferson. The brother had frequently shown signs of mental trouble but was not considered dangerous. Oct. 13 he was beating a pet dog belonging to his sister, and when the latter sought to interfere, he turned upon her, breaking her skull with one of the blows. Later he visited the home of James Fitch, where he found Mrs. Fitch and a small child. He attacked both of them, but went away without performing any serious injury. Miss Curtis had meantime dragged herself painfully to a neighbor's house, where, after telling what had happened, she soon became unconscious. She was 30 years of age. Without notifying the county authorities of the crime the town officials committed Curtis to the insane hospital at Augusta. It is hardly probable that the case will be tried this term.

William M. Hoffses of Portland for obstructing the public highway from Cushing to Thomaston by building and maintaining a fence June 17, 1911, and since.

Joseph Nelson of Vinalhaven for assault and battery on Hilbert Smith at Vinalhaven, Dec. 9, 1911.

Irvin Spear of Warren for assault and battery on an officer (John Roakes, constable) then engaged in the lawful discharge of his official duties, at Thomaston, Oct. 1, 1911.

Fred Knight of Rockland for common nuisance (liquor) at Rockland, Isaac Berlowsky of Rockland for common nuisance (liquor) at Rockland.

The following criminal cases were appealed from Trial Justices and the Rockland Police Court:

State vs. Irving Spear, for drunkenness.

State vs. Irving Spear for assault and battery.

State vs. Clifford Spear for assault and battery.

State vs. Arthur R. Carlette for assault; Payson for Carlette.

State vs. Charles Walter and Walter Macomber for cruelty to animals.

State vs. Frank Blackington for assault and battery.

State vs. U. A. Trask for larceny; Thompson for Trask.

The case of A. L. G. Hills vs. Irene A. Hall, appellant, was tried Monday afternoon. This case was appealed from the Rockland Police Court by Mrs. Hall and its trial occupied about twenty minutes of the jury's time.

The plaintiff sawed fire wood for the defendant at her place in Warren, in which town he also resides, and his machine, and after he had saved a part of the wood the defendant ordered him to take his machine away and agreed to pay him for what he had sawed. The defendant contends that the plaintiff had agreed to apply on his bill for sawing wood bills in favor of herself and her family and also that the contract was made by her son, John, instead of by herself.

The parties themselves were the only witnesses and it is thought that the case holds the records in being the shortest in duration of any ever tried in Knox county.

The jury was not long in coming to a decision and found a verdict for the plaintiff for $14.24. Miller for Plaintiff; Emery for defendant.

The next case was that of Lizzie Thomas vs. Byron Rider, both parties being residents of Rockport, and is an action of trespass for damages done in June, 1910, to the plaintiff's premises, (the lawn in front of her house) by two horses of the defendant, and to the person of the plaintiff by one of the horses, which she claims kicked her as she was endeavoring to lead him off her lawn, as she had done the first one. She was kicked on the right side by the second horse as she stooped to take hold of the strap about his head as he was feeding and she was rendered unconscious. She claims that as a result of the injury received she was obliged to give up her position as operator of a power machine in the shirt factory of the Storey Manufacturing Co. in Rockport, for a time, and that she is not now able to do the work that she did then but does a kind of work which is less remunerative.

The defendant claimed that the plaintiff invited and permitted him to allow his horses to feed on her lawn to keep the grass down and that in the time of her injury the horses were not feeding on the lawn. That the horse never kicked anyone before or since and is kind and clever, but that the plaintiff slapped the horse on the side at the time, and that he wheeled about and kicked her. He also contends that the injury was not serious and that the suit was an afterthought, and would not have been brought had there not afterwards been a controversy between the parties about another matter, involving wages of her son, when she threatened to take action against him in this matter.

The foreman of the grand jury was erroneously stated to be Ralph W. Carleton of Rockport. The foreman in fact is ex-City Marshal Luke A. Spear of Rockland. Deputy Ralph W. Davis has had charge of the second jury since the beginning of the term, instead of Deputy C. S. Coburn.

The case of Edith B. Wentworth, libellant, vs. Albion C. Wentworth, parties of South Thomaston, was continued, the custody of the children of the parties being given to the libellant, pending the libel, and the libellee to pay to the libellant for the support of the children four dollars per week, pending the libel. Walker for libellant; the libellee appearing for himself.

The case of Thomas H. Sullivan, admr. vs. Rockland, Thomaston & Camden Street Railway, new entry, has been set for trial for the first Monday of the April term. Howard for plaintiff; A. S. Littlefield for defendant.

Old-Time Delicacies. Cleopatra, frail and fragile, like many thin people, heartily, and her guests wondered at the rarities of which they partook. There was everything there that gastronomy could think of, except mutton, an exception in favor of the divine Ammon with the hamlike head. Even the roast beef and plum pudding were not lacking, for these delicacies were as popular in those days as the broiled and salted goose, with the good brown stout, and strong barley wine to cheer the spirits and assist the digestion.

Christian Science Editor Has Something to Say About Attempts to Discredit System of Healing.

Criticism of Christian Science methods of dealing with ailments is vigorously answered in a recent issue of the Christian Science Sentinel, as follows:

In this issue we copy from the news columns of the New York World an article which deals with recent criticisms of Christian Science. The reason for the statements made in the article is, as explained, that a short time ago the World compiled a list of thirty-two children who were alleged to have died under Christian Science treatment during the past thirteen years, not in New York city alone, but in the entire country. Whether or not the list was authentic or complete we do not know, but as the article was intended to discredit Christian Science, it is probably safe to assume that all available instances were included, yet that we find simply that the failure of Christian Science treatment in the cases of children, during thirteen years and in the entire country, averaged about two and one half per year, while the failures of all other kinds of practice, no practice, in the cases of children in one year and in one city alone, were over twenty-seven thousand. It may be claimed that some percentage of these twenty-seven thousand did not receive medical treatment, and this is probably true, but we should have to concede that ninety per cent of these cases failed to receive medical treatment (which is not true) in order to bring the ratio of failures of medical practice and the failures of Christian Science practice down to a thousand to one; and even then the proportion would be on an unequal basis, because the medical failures are counted in only one city, while the failures of Christian Science practice are counted in the whole country. As a matter of fact the ratio, according to the figures of the World and the official figures quoted by Mr. Strickler, is over ten thousand in one city to one in the whole country.

It is also to be noticed that the list published in the World included ten cases of diphtheria in the whole country in thirteen years, whereas there were seventeen hundred and fifteen fatal cases of this disease in the city of New York alone in one year under medical treatment, nearly all children under fifteen years of age. We do not speak well for the claimed superiority of medical treatment, neither does the fact that a few years ago in the city of St. Louis more than ten children died within a week from the effects of antitoxin administered to them by physicians. These children, so the record showed, did not have diphtheria at all, but the antitoxin treatment was given to them as "preventive medicine." It certainly prevented them from having this disease, but think of the anguish of the parents who in some cases, at least, had little if any choice in the matter of entrusting the lives of their children to supposedly skilled treatment. Yet no one, so far as we know, was arrested because "somebody blundered." These children were haled into court for having employed or permitted what they or some one in authority considered the best treatment or these children. The inconsistency between this instance and the one in New York is striking. It is also to be noticed that the compilation of the World, is certainly striking.

The opponents of Christian Science treatment have always been ready to seize upon every instance of its apparent failure, but the absurdity of attempting to discredit a system of healing which shows a ratio of but one failure in the whole country to ten thousand in medical practice in one city, as the figures above quoted show, seems to have escaped them. The thinking public, however, can be trusted to draw a "safe and sane" conclusion.—Archibald McLellan in Christian Science Sentinel.

[From New York (N. Y.) World]
When the World published two weeks ago a list of thirty-two children who had died of diphtheria and other diseases during the last thirteen years while being treated by Christian Science practitioners, it moved Virgil O. Strickler, former first reader of First Church of Christ, Scientist, Ninety-sixth street and Central Park West, to compile a few statistics from the vital records of the city to set against the list. This is his report, as he made it when lecturing to Sixth Church of Christ, Scientist, in Lexington Hall, No. 158 East Fifty-eighth street, Tuesday night, (Dec. 12).

"Many people do not understand why Christian Scientists have more faith in Christian Science treatment than they have in drugs. The reason is very plain," said Mr. Strickler. "They get better results under Christian Science treatment than they formerly obtained under the drugging system." The World published on Sunday the names of thirty-two children who, it claimed, had died under Christian Science treatment in the United States during the past thirteen years. Whenever a child, and especially a child, dies under Christian Science treatment the fact is published under glaring headlines in the papers, and as a rule somebody is arrested. It is safe, therefore, to assume that the list published contained the names of all the children who have died under Christian Science treatment during the last thirteen years. In the published list of names ten are said to have died from diphtheria, five from pneumonia and bronchial pneumonia, two from scarlet fever, and the remainder from a variety of causes.

"I have in my hand an official report of the department of health of the city of New York for the year 1910, which shows that during the last year there were seventeen hundred and fifteen deaths from diphtheria, nearly all children under fifteen, under the care of doctors in this city alone, as against ten deaths from the same cause under Christian Science practice in the entire United States in thirteen years. Of these ten cases, only one was in New York city. The official report also shows that there were nine hundred and fifty-three deaths in the city last year from scarlet fever under medical treatment, nearly all of which were children, as against two in the entire Christian Science treatment, and not one of those was in this city.

"The results in pneumonia and bronchial pneumonia are even more startling. The official report shows that ten thousand five hundred and nineteen people died in the city of New York alone last year from these diseases under medical treatment, more than fifty per cent of whom were children under fifteen years of age, as against five children in the entire United States under Christian Science treatment in thirteen years. The report of the board of health also shows that twenty-seven thousand one hundred and eleven children under the age of fifteen years died from all causes under medical treatment in the city of New York last year, as against thirty-two who are shown by the published list to have died under Christian Science treatment in the entire United States in thirteen years. These facts show why Christian Science parents have more faith in Christian Science than in drugs for themselves and their families. If any school of medicine could guarantee cures, it would not be necessary to arrest people in order to compel them to employ doctors of that school. Why do the newspapers call attention in a spectacular way to the death of one child in New York city in thirteen years under Christian Science treatment from diphtheria, when more than fifteen hundred children under the age of fifteen years died last year in the city from the same disease under medical treatment without the newspapers saying a single word about the failure of the doctors?

"Realize in all fairness why should not the doctors be arrested for allowing these fifteen hundred children to die from diphtheria under their treatment, the same as a Christian Science practitioner is arrested when one patient dies from the same disease under her treatment? Or why not arrest the mothers of these fifteen hundred children for employing doctors who allowed their children to die, the same as to arrest the mother of the one child who employed a Christian Science practitioner?"

The Westchester News of White Plains, N. Y., also published the above statement by Mr. Strickler, which it introduced with the following editorial caption: "Very often articles appear in the daily and weekly press of the country in relation to Christian Science, but to our way of thinking the following statement of facts contains an abundance of food for serious thought before passing the subject lightly on."

Coal exports from the United States have trebled in value in the last dozen years. The value of coal passing out of the United States in the year 1911 was, in round terms, 80 million dollars, compared with 65 million in the immediately preceding year. The stated value of coal exported in the 10 months ending with October, 1911, is 44 million dollars, that of the same period of the year 1910, 3 million, and that of coal supplied to vessels engaged in the foreign trade, 18 million, making a total of 65 million dollars and justifying the Bureau of Statistics of the Department of Commerce and Labor in its statement that the aggregate value of coal passing out of the United States in the full calendar year will approximate 80 million dollars. The United States ranks third among the coal-exporting countries of the world, being exceeded in this respect by the United Kingdom, and Germany. In 1910, the latest year for which comparisons can be made, the coal exports of the United Kingdom were valued at 179 million dollars, those of Germany at 104 million, those of the United States, exclusive of bunker coal, 45 million, and those of France about 6 million dollars. The exports of the United States have grown far more rapidly, however, than those of any of the countries named.
